Shipbuilder Hunts Petrified Remains of Noah's Ark in Turkey

ANNAPOLIS, MD.—Fred Avery, a model shipbuilder, is going to eastern Turkey to hunt for Noah's Ark. He wants to make a model of it.

Avery fashions ship models for the United States Naval academy here and is known unofficially as commander of the academy museum's "fleet." But building navy ships in miniature has begun to pall.

Avery wants to make an authentic model of the most famous ship of all—the one that Noah built.

Avery has his passport ready and plans to leave on an expedition which he says "has been planned, secretly for more than three years."

The explorers will head for Mt. Ararat, where the Ark is supposed to have come to rest after the Great Flood.

Avery says the backers of the expedition have "good reasons" to believe they have discovered the petrified remains of the Biblical ship atop the 16,915-foot mountain.

The adventurers hope to reach eastern Turkey where snow and ice cover Mt. Ararat most of the year.

Avery is reluctant to discuss the expedition except to say:

"There have been a number of reports that there is something up there. It could be Noah's Ark, preserved under the ice and snow all these years and suddenly exposed by an upheaval in the earth.

"Or for all I know, it could be a house on top of a mountain."

But if it is the famous ship, Avery hopes to be on hand to fashion the first authentic model of Noah's Ark.

Rabbits Lead Golfers

Astray in Australia

SYDNEY, AUSTRALIA.—Out in Goondiwindi golfers are mad at the millions of rabbits in the district. It's not that they eat the greens, burrow in the fairways or steal the balls. They merely lead the caddies away from the course.

The trouble revolves around the high prices of rabbit carcasses and skins. Local caddies now go rabbiting. Schoolboys make up to $52 a week from rabbits in their spare time. Clever rabbiters are making three times that amount.

Goondiwindi is the center of a sheep raising district in southwestern Queensland.

Technology Will Harness

Hidden Headwaters of Nile

Twentieth century technology is establishing its beachhead at the headwaters of the storied Nile, intent on harnessing some of the forces of the mighty river in the service of modern civilization.

Against the backdrop of an equatorial lotusland, notes National Geographic society, Britain now is pushing ahead with preliminary work for construction of power and flood control dams capable of producing almost two-thirds the amount of electric energy generated in the United Kingdom.

Few hydroelectric development sites have known such a setting. It abounds with flamboyant birds of vivid color. The ponderous hippopotamus and the hungry crocodile make the area their home. And here breeds the deadly tsetse fly, long the scourge of mid-Africa.

Rimming the headwater basin, which is a paradise of eternal summer, mountains rise to snow-capped heights astride the equator. Below them lie the great lakes of Africa, lined with thickets of papyrus and orange - blossoming ambatch and acacia with lotus buds, lily pads and rushes. The largest, Lake Victoria, presents such an expanse that Massachusetts, Connecticut and Rhode Island, thrown in its center, could hardly be sighted from shore.

The Nile is probably the only great river that is born as a waterfall. A reef of rocks and small islands obstructs Lake Victoria's only outlet and the Nile's birth cry reaches the ears of the world as an angry roar of water over a drop of nearly 20 feet.

Bank Needs President; Gets

One Through Want Ad in Paper

HOUSTON, TEX. — The Texas bank which advertised for a president in the "help wanted" column has found its man.

Henry Franke Jr. will take over as president of the First State bank of Texas City. For 20 years Franke has been an employee of the South Texas Commercial National Bank of Houston.

"The girl who took my ad laughed," said Dee Walker, board chairman of the Texas City bank, "but the 50 replies I received proved she was wrong."

Walker said the ad brought replies from at least one junior executive of every Houston bank and from as far as Oklahoma and Missouri.

The ad read: "Wanted—Bank president. Opening for president of $¾ - million dollar bank, located within 50 miles of Houston in Texas, in city with population of 35,000."
